A real-life transformation

Sleep apnea treatment changed Maria's life.

Before correct diagnosis, Maria's sleep and quality of life were affected. In her own words:

"I was depressed and unable to understand what was happening. My head felt cloudy.

The quality of my sleep was very poor.

I had no energy, no life to give my family and friends. I didn't feel like working.

Being sleepy and tired all the time, I had an awful temper (I was really cranky!) and didn't feel like listening to anyone. Life was not easy."

Do you see a reflection of yourself in Maria?

Learn how your life can be transformed ...

Finding herself again

As so many women like Maria have discovered, treatment can make a world of difference.

“Now I am completely different. I feel happy rather than depressed. When I go to sleep, I feel confident that I will wake up refreshed! I sleep well and I’m actually breathing!

I have energy for myself and my loved ones. I’m driving a lot now, learning to use a computer, studying ... I even fit in exercise and some walking! I’ve rediscovered holidays, the joy of shopping and chatting with friends. I’m feeling so good, I just want to live in the moment.”

The right treatment for sleep apnea can significantly transform your quality of life, just as it did for Maria.

Maria is not alone ... and neither are you

7 million American women have sleep apnea*

It can happen to women of any age, with or without any other contributing conditions. Sleep apnea is often linked to health changes during pregnancy and menopause. It is associated with conditions such as hypertension, diabetes, obesity, heart failure and stroke.

The benefits of being treated are priceless

You have the energy to exercise and feel good.
You have more energy for fun, family and friendships.
You have confidence in work and business.
You have more time to be you.

And when you feel great, it shows!
